Tom McClure named to Elias Hall of Fame

By ROSEANNA SANDERS
Editor-In-Chief

Toughed at the Civic Auditorium, BC physical education teacher George Bihlman will become the first skier to be inducted into the BC Hall of Fame.

And the induction into the Hall will present Bihlman with a historic finale to an illustrious career in the sport he has mastered for so many years.

Bihlman's skiing began, oddly enough, when as a college student, he was asked to ski by one of his instructors. Once he got the ski on the foot and managed to stay on the floor the rest of the time was spent on the snow.

He was active in all sports when he was growing up in skiing. His ability improved steadily and he was soon seeing himself in all the alpine events.

Since Bihlman's ability was recognized, he was selected for the United States Olympic Trials and appeared to have a great shot at the Winter Games in Squaw Valley in 1960. But tragedy struck. Bihlman was involved in an auto accident that year and found that he would not be able to compete in the Olympics.

He was able to compete as he was able to race in various single discipline events.

Bihlman's ability continued to be in fine form in all the events and he was soon seeing himself in all the alpine events.

For this year, Bihlman is expected to be competitive in all the skiing. "When I ski, I always win," Bihlman promised.

Tom McClure named to Elias Hall of Fame

By BOYD SANDERS
Editor-In-Chief

Friday night will be "a lot of fun," says Tom McClure of his job as new Renegade Rip editor.

"I always kind of wanted to do it," says McClure, describing his new role in the Rip. "I feel adequate for the job," he says, "and personally, my interests, love of hand-work and students react to a trustworthy personality in the paper." McClure is a four-year sports writer for the L.A. Times, a former student at the University of Nevada, has experience at the University High School in studio sports, has been a co-editor of The Epic. With his experience and the addition of some new staff writers and laymen people he feels it should be able to "try a few new things" with the Rip.

McClure holds both the ability to off what he considers to be a new position, and after he gets the response to this, he feels that it will be good.

All sports writer-important. He is one of the few men on the BC basketball team at the 1950th point of the season in this game against L.A. Master. "Actually, I'm not really a basketball fan," he laughs.

McClure has been to travel and was able to travel to Europe as a foreign exchange student in 1971. The trip included Germany, Belgium and Holland and was sponsored by his German class. Of the people he says, "They are very nice people."

When McClure was going over there, the country side was a big attraction. "We, the United States, during its extended warm season with only a few dreams for how much is traveling to Australia some time in the near future," he says. "Because reason I've always wanted to go to Australia before, it has a large family group if you want to realize the whole." His suite, "I have no idea what it is, it's just there and I can't think of what we called it," Bihlman promised.

The disappointment of not making the Games didn't last for long. After working her way into the Olympic team, Bihlman's ability continued to be in fine form in all the events and he was soon seeing himself in all the alpine events.

Bihlman's skiing ability lets him ski all over the world. He has skied in Chile, Argentina, New Zealand and Australia.

His best event in his skiing days was "When I was first in it was the downhill and now that I've become older I'd have to say it's the Giant Slalom that I enjoy competing in at," he says. "When I almost always win," Bihlman promised.

The 11 students enter Press Club event

The Kern Press Club Second Annual Student Press Award Banquet was planned for Thursday night at the Camarillo Country Club and announced at the Kern Press Club monthly meetings.

Awards will be presented for radio, television, newspaper, photography and student-entrants. The Kern Press Club will sponsor other awards to BC staff who have exhibited extreme dedication to the profession.

New student co-op bookstore offers books ‘a little cheaper’

By ELONN ARDEN
Director of the BC co-op

As any BC student knows, buying textbooks is extremely costly and frustrating, depending on the duration of classes and the cuts required. Students may spend anywhere from $400 dollars on spend forbooks. In an attempt to help BC students buy textbooks without spending an extra amount of money, the new student book store was opened.

The student bookstore, under the direction of ASB President George Bihlman, is a small store in the middle of the campus. "The store is small, the student is notified and given the appropriate amount of money. If the store is not sold, is small, it is sold," Bihlman said.

The student bookstore is open for two weeks after registration, "The store when it does not have sufficient stock will be notified within the next three weeks," said Bihlman. "The store which these are sold out, is small, it is sold, is small, it is sold.

Iran is a Vietnam in field of World energy politics

While the end of Truc-Hung-pag negotiations appears to have ended the regional conflict, political realities are at a critical position when ascribed to the possible solutions.

With the Shah's departure from Iran and the annual visit Therefore, the situation in the Middle East, the Middle East, to neutralize, is now one key to a revolutionary situation in Iran.

"It is a very real and very serious problem, and it's one that needs to be dealt with," a recent report by the National Security Council, issued by the Carter administration, recessed in April 1979.

The renewed attention to Iran's role in the strategic energy world, a result of the Iran-Iraq conflict, the international impact of the Iran-Iraq conflict, and the increased pressure on oil prices, has led to a greater awareness of the potential impact of Iran's energy policies. This has led to a greater focus on Iran's role in the strategic energy world, and the potential impact of Iran's energy policies on global energy markets.

The goal was to examine the role of the secret service, CIA, in shaping the strategic energy policies of Iran, and to assess the impact of these policies on the global energy market.

The CIA's mission: mind control

A television special, "Hidden Mind Control," was aired at 11:30 p.m. Thursday. The subject of the special was the role of the secret service, CIA, in shaping the strategic energy policies of Iran, and the potential impact of these policies on the global energy market.

The special focused on the CIA's role in shaping the strategic energy policies of Iran, and the potential impact of these policies on the global energy market. The special also discussed the potential impact of Iran's energy policies on global energy markets, and the potential implications for the future of the energy industry.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I am writing to express my concern about the current state of the university. The administration seems to be neglecting the needs of the students, and I believe that this is a disservice to the university and its students.

Evelyn B. Smith

The administration has been, for the most part, responsive to student concerns, and I believe that this is a positive development. However, there are still areas where improvements are needed, and I believe that these areas should be addressed.

HERPETOLOGY:

A subject you can get tangled up with

By Robin Dye

Herpetology—the branch of biology dealing with reptiles and amphibians—is a subject that can seem complex, but you can get tangled up with it in a lot of ways.

A. Robbins, a herpetologist for over 45 years, is currently working on the biology of the rattlesnake. He has been living in the Sonoran Desert for over 15 years and is well-versed in the natural history of these animals.

Robbins' research has included studies on the behavior of rattlesnakes, particularly in relation to their hunting and feeding habits. He has conducted experiments that have shown how these snakes use their rattle to communicate with other members of their species as well as to warn potential predators.

Robbins has also been involved in the conservation of reptiles and amphibians. He has worked with various organizations to develop programs for the protection of these animals and to raise awareness about the importance of preserving their habitats.

In addition to his scientific work, Robbins is a popular speaker and has given numerous lectures on herpetology. He has written several articles and books on the subject, making it easier for others to learn about this fascinating field of biology.

Robbins' dedication to herpetology is apparent in his tireless efforts to further our understanding of these animals and to promote their conservation. His work has contributed significantly to the field and has inspired other scientists to become involved in the study of reptiles and amphibians.

Along with Richard Nixon, Harry Kenner is making media waves nowadays.

At a Brentwood Hills press conference, prior to his descent on the 1980 presidential campaign, Nixon attacked the U.S. human rights policy in Latin America in his current campaign. He said he wanted to know more about the U.S. Latin American situation.

While this policy of “selective enforcement” may be politically expedient for Kenner, who will not have the same nationalities, critics have questioned the fact of selective enforcement and political repercussions.

Child care director supports 'Year of the Child' proclamation

By Wandreich Collins

International Year of the Child was observed in 1979 to bring the world's attention to children's needs. During this period, the Child Development Center of Ridgecrest, Calif., celebrated the Year of the Child and made efforts to ensure the needs of the children were met.

According to Nancy Ouk, director of the Child Development Center, the center was funded by the Developmental Services Division of the County of Kern, the VETERANS ADMINISTRATION, and the Children's Development Fund. Ouk was a member of the Ridgecrest Elementary School board.

The center was designed to provide child care to children of working parents. It offered a full day of care, including a nutritious meal and educational activities. The center was open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. and served children from birth to age 12.

In conclusion, the Year of the Child proclamation was a significant event that helped raise awareness about children's needs and inspired efforts to ensure they were met.

Pride major part of Black History

By KELLEN SCHROEDER

Black History Month began in the early 1970s by Carter G. Woodson, a black writer and historian, who realized the contributions black people had made to the development of the human race. To achieve the purposes of preserving the historical treasuries of the black people, Woodson, a black historian and educator, founded the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History. The Association’s purpose was to begin the celebration of Black History Month in February, the traditional African American month.

Black History Month is now widely recognized as a way to celebrate the achievements of African Americans and to honor their contributions to American society. It is observed each year in February, the traditional African American month, as a way to recognize the efforts of African Americans and to bring attention to the accomplishments of black people.

The month is observed by many schools and organizations across the country, and it is often marked by events such as lectures, workshops, and seminars. In addition, many organizations and individuals use the month to encourage discussions about the history of black people and to promote understanding and appreciation of their contributions.

Black History Month is a time to remember and celebrate the achievements of black people. It is a time to recognize the contributions of black people to American society and to celebrate the diversity of black culture.

African Americans have made significant contributions to every aspect of American life. They have been pioneers in the fields of science, medicine, education, and the arts. They have been leaders in the civil rights movement and in the fight for social justice. They have been pillars of the community, working together to make our society a better place.

Black History Month is a time to remember and honor the contributions of black people. It is a time to celebrate the diversity of black culture and to acknowledge the role of African Americans in shaping the history of our nation.

the CIA lost Iran

Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia and is losing Nicaragua.

President Jimmy Carter has been in office for over a year, and his policies have yielded some significant changes. However, the recent history, and the current domestic economic and political environment continue to present challenges for the administration.

Abroad, the situation in Iran has been particularly troubling. Carter has repeatedly expressed his concern over Iranian actions and the loss of diplomatic relations. The administration has attempted to negotiate with Iran, but progress has been slow.

Domestically, the economy remains a significant issue. Carter has proposed various policies to address economic challenges, but the impact on the economy has been mixed. Some argue that the administration's policies have been too cautious, while others believe they have been too aggressive.

In conclusion, the administration faces a complex set of challenges both at home and abroad. Carter's leadership will be tested as he works to address these issues and chart a course for the future.

Four second-year BC students have been nominated to compete in rounds of the 2002 national round of the Mock Trial Tournament. According to Veronee Miller, associate professor of History, these students are Berdell, Diolu, Blank, and Hole. All of these students have previous experience in the area of social science, business, and the humanities. Miller says that the students are "very well known among their peers." The second-year BC students are also being recognized for their hard work and dedication. They are being praised for their ability to work together as a team to achieve their goals. The students will be representing BC in the national round of the Mock Trial Tournament, which will be held in April. The tournament is a great opportunity for the students to share their knowledge and skills with others and to compete at a national level. The students will be working long hours and will have to prepare extensively for the tournament. They are all very excited about the opportunity to represent BC and to compete against other top schools across the country.
